A NORTHER ON THE PLAINS. Horrible Sufferings of a Party of Travelers on the Solomon, Between the Two Pacific Roads.

The party consisted of five, including Prof. L. P. Cooke, of Woolhampton, R. I., Col. Sam. James, of Los Augelos, and three herders, named James Loyd, H. N. Grespy and - Sayers. The party left the Platte Valley, near its junction with Plum Creek, for the purpose of striking across the country towards Ellsworth. from which point it was intended to proceed to Texas. They started out with one wagon drawn by two mules, Loyd and Savers, being mounted on two brancho ponies. Nothing transpired worthy of mention until last Wednesday night. The party had reached the north fork of the Solomon river, and were encamped in a ravine on the southern side of that stream, when the severe snowstorm and hurricane of last Wednesday night struck them. Prof. Cooke describes the storm as one of the most terrifiche ever experienced. The wind and snow commenced to pelt down early in the evenearly as four o'clock in the afternoon, and before the party succeeded in reaching timber, they found it impossible to proceed farther, the trail was lost in the drifting snow, and sudden darkness coming upon shelter of a rocky bluff. An attempt was made to kindle a fire with a few weeds and dead willows, but the force of the wind to wrap up in their blankets and robes and robes and bedding was becoming a wind-

It was finally resolved to save life to get up and build a fire, and, to do this, the bed of the wagon was taken offaud propped up as a shelter from the pelting sleet, while a few blows from the axe made firewood of the wheels. A fire was made after some difficulty, and all cronched around it with blankets and robes drawn around to shelter it from being blown away by the terrible blasts sweeping over the plains. He describes the night's suffering as the most horrible he ever experienced. Towards morning the wind moderated, and daylight dawned upon a scene dreary and uninviting. Loyd states that they got upon the trail of the animals which led them down among the rocky bluffs of the North Solomon, when they became separated, and both became Loyd made a fire in the creek bottoms and spent the following night; and next morning came upon the mules grazing upon the edge of a small bottom, which was comparatively sheltered from the storm. The choice seems to lay between two, one of which crosses the river near the Roane Iron Company's mills, and strikes the valley at the foot of the mountain, not a great distance above the "Suck;" the other to run up the river on the south side and cross over about eight miles above the city, near Tom Crutchfield's farm. TOM SCOTT'S SCHEME. From the Washington Republican, Dec. 12-The affairs of the California and Texas Construction Company are being actively avestigated in Philadelphia. Advices received here are to the effect that a large number of the creditors have consented to grant the extension asked for by Col. Scott and other indorsers of the company's paper. Within two weeks probably the ancial difficulties will be amicably arranged. The creditors generally express confidence in the management of the company, and feel safe as to the final result. If it should happen that the affairs of the Construction Company cannot be extricated was so strong that it was found an inexhaustible supply of coal only eight from difficulty, the Texas Pacific Railway Company will not be by that fact embarrassed, but will immediately proceed with the work, taking the forfeited contracts out of the hands of the Construction Company, which is a distinct corporation. The details of the bill are not yet ready, but it is well known that the leading feature will be an effort to thoroughly secure the Government by first-mortgage bonds, giving not only the assets but all the property and evenues of the road as security. The Northern Pacific will be included in the arrangement, and a combined effort will be made to secure a loan of $75,000,000 for each road in convertible bonds at a low rate of interest.

BREADSTUFFS REVIEW. The market for breadstuffs for the weel ading Dec. 11 has been extremely unset tled, although there has been but little fluc nation in prices. Some articles have slowly but steadily advanced, while others have omewhat weakened in the absence of buy ers, but have not materially declined, owing to the firmness of holders. The articles the advance may have been legitimate enough, considering the ultimate supply and demand, have not avdanced in the usual way. The higher markets have gen rally been sellers rather than buyers; that s, holders have advanced their asking prices from day to day on a continued dull market, basing their action on the comparative ly light supply in store here and the high cost and limited means of transportation to the scaboard during the winter, coupled with the heavy prospective demand from abroad, and not upon the actual demand a the moment, either for spot or future goods.

Shippers have also been in a position that they were able to remain to a great extent out of the market at these advanced prices. which they have stoutly resisted, from the act that they bought more freely and slightly ahead of their present wants before the close of the navigation, in anticipation f higher prices upon its close. The pres at dullness is an unhealthy one, and the pactivity could not have lasted so long as t has had it not been for the warm weather, that has led shippers and dealers both to sope almost against hope that the canal would open sufficiently to let forward the ain frozen in. This expectation has kept ippers off the market to a great extent, nd has caused all or nearly all the weakess that has been exhibited on the part of receivers, as the chances have been more favorable to the accomplishment of this bject. Already there are fears entertained of a light supply here before long, and the railroads of the West are bringing all their available rolling stock into requisition to oring wheat forward; and it is probable hat the demand for freight for wheat alone will tax their capacity to the utmost, leaving corn, oats and other articles to come bales; in transit included in the above 720 forward if there is any room left, and if bales, not, to remain back until the prices at the NEV hem precedence over wheat for a time, until the supply of the latter is reduced to a arther advances sufficiently to call out a | 300 bales. supply, when the process will be repeated corn, etc., again, by bidding up freights. This reasoning is, of course, based upon the ssumption that our railroad capacity is not equal to the demands that will be made upon it. New Orleans Tobacco Market. The semi-monthly tobacco circular of T. a low range of prices in the spring appears inevitable, Western buyers and seaboard factors, if they lose sight of the fact that production has gone so much ahead of conimption, at the high prices of the past two easons, may realize the position of the celebrated Kentucky coon hunter, Mose Cox, when many years ago he sawed the limb off between himself and the tree.
